

DOT Type 1 Light Duty Turbidity Curtain

What is a DOT Type 1 Light Duty Turbidity Curtain and who is it for?

DOT Type 1 light duty floating turbidity barriers are ideal for containing silt in calm water applications such as ponds, lakes, canals and waterways with light wind or current. These curtains are floating and used to control and contain silt / sediment within an immediate work area thereby preventing anything from floating down stream and affecting marine life. Floating Turbidity Curtains protect our waters and environment.

DOT Type 1 floating turbidity barriers are normally used by contractors building bridges or working around or nearby a body of water. Why use an DOT Type 1 Light Duty Turbidity Curtain vs. another type of barrier: This particular model is recommended when compliance with United States DOT Type 1 floating turbidity curtain requirements is a factor and the marine construction project happens in a calm water application.

Where are DOT Type 1 Light Duty Turbidity Curtains used?

- Small ponds
- Small lakes
- Canals
- Waterways with light wind or current
